9:00 AM TO 3:00 PM

August 2015 Session

Sundays, August 2, 9, 16, 23
9:00 AM TO 3:00 PM

Experience the world of urban agriculture and sustainable design with other Chicago-area high school students and teachers.

This dynamic, four day, summer program is free and open to high school students entering, this fall, grades 9–12, and to teachers teaching at any grade. The program is centered at KAM Isaiah Israel, 1100 East Hyde Park Blvd where each of the session's four Sundays will begin and end.

Hands-on learning will take place at KAM Isaiah Israel's award-winning, food-producing micro-farm as well as at several other neighborhood growing sites. The focus will be on urban farming and sustainable land use. Through project based learning, energy and resource conservation, local food production and eco and food justice concepts will be explored with guidance and instruction from experienced urban farmers and environmentalists. Participants enjoy lunch together each Sunday. (Please bring a bag lunch.)

Applications are available at kamii.org/ylsp. High school student applicants, please include a letter of recommendation from a teacher or other community member. Application deadline is June 19, 2015. Enrollment is limited. Students who complete the program may be eligible for community service credit. Certificates will be awarded upon completion of the program. For additional information and questions, please email socialjustice@kamii.org.
