Enable Indian Language

If you see squares or question marks when you type, it is probably because Indian language is not enabled on your computer. Please follow this process in order to enable Indian language on your computer.

Click on Start > Control Panel as shown in the image.
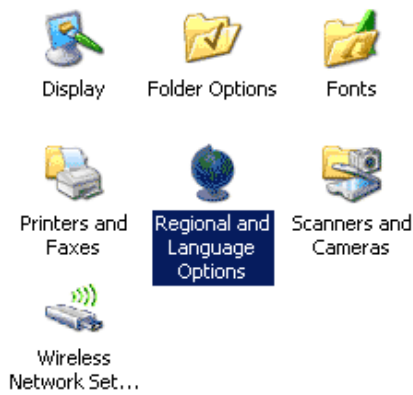

For Windows
2000, XP ->

For Windows
Vista, Windows 7
->

If you have Category View, make sure you change it to Classic View by clicking on the link "Switch to Classic View"

Now double click on "Regional and Language Options".

It will open up a dialog box. Click on "Languages" tab and make sure that "Install files for complex script" checkbox is checked as shown in the image. When you click OK, you may need Windows installation CD in order to complete installation.

Now you will be able to type into Notepad and all other applications. If this does not solve your problem, please visit the wikipedia article which describes Multilingual support for various OS
