VIEW POINT: BANKING

Banking stocks were the toast of Dalal Street Monday as punters shifted their attention away from the technology stocks. The bull charge at the banking stocks was indicative of a sea change in the market perception on the interest rates. The feeling in the street was that the interest rates may have topped out and were on their way down. We believe that while the interest rates may have reached a plateau, RBI is unlikely to relent in the foreseeable future, as the sliding inflation is still way above the newly pegged mark of 3%.

The markets are likely to get off their high horse today and are likely to be in a contemplative mood ahead of the Infosys guidance. Punters with long futures in IT may do well to convert them into Calls, and those holding the stocks may consider buying Puts for a third of the quantity. Don't jump the gun.
