VIEW POINT: UPSIDE SEEMS CAPPED

The markets bounced back yesterday with a 221 point gain, after a 540 rout the other day. The Sensex formed a higher bottom at 12861. The leaves the markets with a hope that the double bottom formed at 12,800 could stay and provide the necessary support. The upside seems to be capped at 13750.

The international cues, however, are not all that great. The Dow braved a 200 point fall to close with a loss of just 34 points and the Nikkei too is in the red this morning. Corporate India seems to be on the path of confrontation with the Government. Steel, cement and car prices have been hiked. As inflation remains the top item on the Government's agenda, expect moves from the powers that be to effectively make the industry realize, who's the boss. We do not like this scenario. However, unless you see the 12,800 level crumbling, do not grow your bearish claws as yet.

THE INDICATORAcross the Atlantic

U.S. stocks fell on Thursday, even as they recovered from an early steep fall, as upbeat news about the manufacturing sector helped in morning trade, but couldn't completely offset continued nervousness about Asian markets, distressed lenders, and the economy -- the same factors that triggered heavy selling pressure two days ago

The major indices dropped sharply at the open after new selloffs overseas and found enough strength to ever-so-briefly edge in to positive territory late in the day. After a short stay in the green however, shares retreated back below the flat line.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average finished with a loss of 34.29 points, or 0.28%, at 12,234.34. At their worst, the industrials sank more than 200 points.

Of the Dow's 30 components, 20 finished negative. Citigroup was the best performer, up 1.4%, while Intel slumped 1.4%.

The S&P 500 erased most of its earlier loss and ended lower by 3.65 points, or 0.26%, at 1403.17. The Nasdaq Composite shed 11.94 points, or 0.49%, at 2404.21.

Most of the selling pressure was relieved at 10 a.m. EST after the Institute for Supply Management said its manufacturing index for February rose to a reading of 52.3. Economists had expected the index to advance to 50 from January's 49.3.

Numbers above 50 represent an expansion in factory activity, while those below the mark point to a contraction.

Even though the major indices bounced from session lows following the ISM data, the Dow remains lower by 553 points, or 4.3%, from its all-time closing high set last week. The index is also down by 229 points, or 1.8%, for the year.

Meanwhile, the S&P 500 has fallen 3.9% since its six-year high last week and 1.1% for the year. The Nasdaq is down 4.8% from its 2007 high, but is off only 0.5% for the year.

Little relief was found in the remainder of Thursday's economic data. The Commerce Department said that personal income rose a greater-than-expected 1% in January. Excluding food and energy, the personal consumption expenditure price index is now higher by 2.3% over the past year, outside of the Federal Reserve's comfort zone range of 1% to 2%.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said that initial jobless claims rose by 7,000 to 338,000 last week. The less volatile four-week moving average increased by 7,500 claims to 335,250.

THE INDICATOR

Treasuries were recently clinging to gains. The 10-year note was up 6/32 in price, yielding 4.55%, and the 30-year bond was gaining 7/32 to yield 4.67%.

Commodities were mixed. Crude oil reversed losses and was higher by 21 cents, finishing at $62 a barrel at the New York Mercantile Exchange, while gold was lower by $7.40 to $665.10 an ounce. Natural gas slipped 2 cents to $7.28 per million British thermal units
