VIEW POINT: MARKETS SET TO GIVE UP GAINS

The 117 points gain that the Sensex carved out for itself on Thursday is likely to be given up this morning as our markets will oscillate with the rest of the global markets, which are nursing losses this morning. Philly Fed manufacturing Index, which is an advance indicator of the health of the US economy came in at minus 24 as compared to hopes that the gauge may show only minus 10.

At close Thursday, the Nifty Futures had managed to tip toe back into positive territory, though the last half an hour average still showed a discount of 10 points, helped by resurgence in technology stocks. Positions were also built in the metal space and select popular counters like IFCI and Polaris. However, the markets are likely to begin with deep gashes with only minor chances of a recovery. The Nifty's next meaning full support is only at 5021, which happens to be the 200 DMA, though you have a minor foothold at 5116.

U.S. stocks on Thursday closed lower, with the major indexes each chalking up losses of more than 1%, after data highlighting the nation's economic slowdown sank early momentum sparked by technology issues

The Dow Jones Industrial Average lost 142.96 points, or 1.2%, at 12,284.30, and the S&P 500 was down 17.50 points, or 1.3%, at 1342.53. The tech-heavy Nasdaq Composite fell 27.32 points, or 1.2%, to 2299.78.

After a positive start, New York shares dropped significantly when the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia said its monthly index sank to negative 24 from minus 20.9 in January. A number below 0 indicates a contraction in activity, and that was worse than economists' already poor average expectation of a negative 10 reading.

Evidence has been building for months that the economy is in danger of entering a recession, in no small part due to the carnage in the credit markets, which has led the Fed to sharply lower borrowing costs.

However, some data have remained upbeat, and policymakers have been reluctant to completely abandon the argument that too much easing could create inflationary pressures, especially in an environment of soaring commodity prices.

In the tech space, Cisco got an initial boost after Citigroup upgraded the company to buy from hold, citing its valuation. However, Cisco closed down a penny to $23.19, retreating from a sizable climb earlier in the day.

One of the top gainers was Research In Motion, which lifted its targets for subscriber additions. RIM shares jumped 9% to finish at $106.69.

As for commodities, gold futures hit an all-time high of $953.40 an ounce earlier, but ended the day down $2.30 to $943.80.

Crude oil slipped, as well, after the Energy Information Administration reported that U.S. crude stockpiles rose by 4.2 million barrels in the week ended Feb. 15 -- well above the expected build. Oil gave up 66 cents to $97.57 a barrel.

Elsewhere, bond insurers were again in focus after MBIA rebuked hedge fund manager Bill Ackman's plan to split up both that company and rival Ambac Financial, claiming it only benefits Ackman's short positions on the companies. MBIA lost 2.3%, and Ambac slid 7.1%.

In more financial-sector news, media reported that broker Lehman Brothers is cutting 200 jobs. Lehman stock surrendered 2.3% to end the day.

Similarly, coffee giant Starbucks announced that it would fire around 600 employees amid a larger restructuring effort. The company, which recently reinstated founder Howard Schultz as CEO, has been struggling amid heightened competition. Shares closed off 2.4% at $17.83.
