Parsvnath Developers Ltd (PDL), one of north India's big real estate player plans to raise Rs10.9bn from the market to finance its expansion plans over the next 4 years. At a price band of Rs250-300, the stock is attractively valued. We advise investors to subscribe to the public issue with a 1-2 year time horizon.

Strong industry growth prospects

India's competitive cost advantage favoring IT/ITES segment along with favorable demographic factors in the form of rising working population, growing income levels have created demand for commercial space and urban housing. Demand is expected to remain robust with the commercial and retail segment space requirement at 350mn sq ft over 2005-10. Demand supply gap in the housing segment is expected to be around 17.9mn units by 2010. Indian real estate market is expected to grow from around US$12bn in 2005 to US$50bn in 2010 at a CAGR of 33%. The growth in sector is expected to improve its market capitalization to GDP from mere 1.7% currently to more than 6% by 2010.

Huge land bank along with attractive market positioning

PDL has successfully completed 3.5mn sq ft of development and currently has planned projects with developable space of 108.7mn sq ft. North India and specifically NCR region has been the major operational region for PDL. This is expected to remain so with 82% of the future development space coming from this region. While we do not subscribe that the entire north India region has sufficient economic activity to support such development, though majority of the pockets of PDL's operations have strong viability proposition.

Valuations offer upside potential

At the higher end of the price band, PDL is valued at Rs55.4bn. While earnings multiple of 37.9x to the annualized FY07 EPS of Rs7.9 do not justify the pricing, the stock appears very attractive on a project cash flow per share basis. However, this valuation would materialize over a 1-2 year period and advise investors to subscribe to the issue with a longer time frame.

Investment rationale

Strong Industry growth prospects

Population growth and inward migration through increased employment have been the drivers of real estate markets worldwide. Strong economic growth, huge population, large skilled workforce, growing employment, and increasing purchasing power has kick started the growth in real estate market in India.

Multiple themes driving real estate prices

World's best real estate markets have been built on one or many themes of economic growth. In India, currently, we are experiencing a congruence of multiple themes at the same time like the IT/ITES outsourcing, housing, retailing and hospitality.

IT/ITES sector – India acting as world's back office

India's competitive cost advantage has seen the country being dubbed as the world's back office. The sector is expected to grow at a CAGR of 25-30% over the next five years, which would create an incremental demand for 150mn sq. ft of commercial space by 2010

Housing – Demand far outweighing supply

With approximately 210mn households in 2005, India had a housing shortage of 19.8mn units. We expect the households to rise to 235mn by 2010 and 294mn by 2020. We estimate supply would have to grow by 3% to meet 100% demand. This is higher than the growth rate witnessed in the past 4 decades. Complementing this, the sector is witnessing a renewed demand for premium housing leading to stronger prices.

Organized retailing – Still at the tip of the iceberg

With organized retailing forming only 3% of the total retail pie, India is far behind its Asian peers. We estimate this share to go up to 11% by 2010 there by creating a demand of 150mn sq ft for mall space. Only 75mn sq ft is being added by 2007, leaving ample room for growth.

Hospitality – unbounded growth

Foreign tourist arrivals have shown a 15% CAGR over the past two years. WTO expects this to grow at 8.8% annually over the next 10 years. This coupled with a 25% growth in domestic air passenger traffic has kept hotel industry Average Room Rental (ARR) and Occupancy Rates (OR) high. The country is currently facing a supply crunch of 27,000 rooms in 5-4-3 star category. 15,753 room capacity is coming up in the premium segment over 2006-2011.

PDL - Sizeable land bank with concentration in north India

PDL has concentrated its operations in the fast growing NCR and north India region. All its revenues over the past four years have also come from the north India region and would continue to maintain its dominance in the revenue share. 82% of the PDL's land bank of 108.7mn sq ft is located in north India and another 11% in the south.

Residential projects dominate expansion

In line with the industry, residential projects dominate PDL's expansion plans. Residential segment contributes 88.6% of the total developable space out of the total 108.7mn sq ft.. Integrated township projects contribute 70.9% of the total projects as is the case with most north India based developers, where separate bungalows are preferred type of home in the city periphery and outside city limits.

96.2 sq ft residential space could result in EBITDA of Rs61bn

While we currently do not have estimations of revenue for the 108.7mn sq ft, the company has declared development costs including land cost at Rs133bn. Out of this 96.2mn sq ft is residential segment, which would be sold on development. Assuming a 40% gross margin, PDL could turn revenue of Rs174bn and EBITDA of Rs61bn in this segment alone. This reflects a net saleable rate of Rs1,809 per sq ft and net realization Rs633per sq ft, which is less than the market rates currently.

Investment concerns
Rising competition in the north Indian markets

Majority of India's largest real estate players have their operations in the north Indian markets. Most of PDL's projects are in the same region-district as these big players. Greater supply coming to the market in the same area could lead to drop in property prices and consequently impact profitability.

Slowdown in property prices

All real estate stocks are a direct play on the property prices. Any rise in property price directly seeps in the bottom line and any drop impacts profitability severely. Property prices have run up sharply in the past two years, resulting in greater supply coming in to the market. Lower economic activity in any regions might not be able to create enough demand to sustain high prices pulling them down.

Valuations attractive - Subscribe

The issue has been priced in the range of Rs250-300, giving PDL a market cap of Rs55.4bn (including the green shoe option). This looks attractive in comparison to the discounted net value of its projects in hand. We avoid valuing and comparing the company on earnings multiple as it would not reflect the true potential of the company. While we could see some value on listing, there is much more in store for the long term. We advise investors to subscribe to the issue with a 1-2 year time horizon.
