SpiceJet to acquire 10 new Boeings

Delhi-based low-cost carrier SpiceJet gearing up to go global in 2010. The current policy is to allow domestic airlines to fly abroad provided it has completed five years of domestic operations. SpiceJet on Tuesday placed additional orders for 10 new Boeing 737-800/900 ER aircraft at a list price of $700 million. The 10 new aircraft will enter the fleet between 2009 and 2011, taking the total fleet size to 35. SpiceJet had earlier placed orders for 20 aircraft, whose delivery would be completed by October 2008. Analysts tracking the company said the airline is keen to fly to neighbouring destinations in South East Asia and the Gulf. When contacted Siddhant Sharma, CEO, SpiceJet, refused to comment on the carrier's international ambitions. SpiceJet would pay $10 million upfront for fresh orders, while the remaining would be financed by raising debt and through sale-and-lease buyback of aircraft. Domestic carriers have been lobbying with the government for relaxing the five-year moratorium for flying abroad and bringing it down to three years. They have been arguing for a level-playing field for domestic players on this issue. Many start-up international carriers are flying into India while Indian carriers are barred from flying out. Carriers such as Air Deccan and Kingfisher Airlines are planning to fly from international destinations into the country, if the government does not relent. Air Deccan's parent company, Deccan Aviation, has entered into a joint venture with a Sri Lankan company to fly from the Island nation to several destinations into India. Kingfisher Airlines is currently working on getting approvals from the US authorities for direct flights between San Fransisco and Bangalore by middle of next year. If government relaxes the norms, airline analysts expect Indian low cost carriers to connect major Indian cities to destinations in South East Asia. All this comes at a time when Malaysia-based low cost carrier Air Asia is gearing up to launch long-haul flights between Asia, Europe and the United States. Plans include connecting several Indian cities into the long-haul sector.
