

Welcome – and thank you for your interest in FIRST Tech Challenge...

The FIRST Tech Challenge (FTC) robotics competition is an intermediate program that provides an affordable, accessible opportunity for all high schools to participate in FIRST. Aimed at high school-aged youth, teams create robots to compete in an annual challenge geared around real-world robotic problems in a fun and fast-paced game.

Teams are not only judged how their robots perform on the field, but in other ways as well including: teamwork and Gracious Professionalism, the engineering process they followed, how they connect with their communities, and how they think outside the box. FTC is one of four FIRST Robotics Programs. Each is targeted to different age groups and needs.

How FTC Works

- Teams are composed of young people, ages 12-18 (Grades 7-12).
- Adult coaches and mentors are involved with assisting the students in most areas
- Teams use a modular, reusable robotics kit that includes everything teams need to compete including: a complete metal set, robot controller, motors, sensors, gaming controllers, rechargeable batteries and chargers, and software.
- Teams come from public, private, or home-schools; after-school groups, churches, civic and neighborhood groups. Teams solicit support from their community and corporate sponsors.
