Interpreting Pivot Table

Pivot Table provides the primary support and resistances for a particular trading day, with the Pivot Point being the inflection spot.

Pivot Point helps to determine market trend, i.e. if the Pivot Point is breached upwards then the market is bullish and vice versa.

Pivot Point Price is an inflection spot, which helps to determine entry and exit points for traders.

As a thumb rule, If Market Price > Pivot Point Price, then one can go long in the market with either the Pivot Point or Support 1 as the stoploss, with Resistance 1 or Resistance 2 as the target. On the other hand, if Market Price < Pivot Point Price, then one can go short in the market with either the Pivot Point or Resistance 1 as the stoploss, with Support 1 or Support 2 as the target.
