How Will They Know?

Praise God, there have been amazing strides forward in Bible translation in recent years. From the use of satellite internet access to Oral Bible Translation, translation into minority languages is happening with increasing speed and effectiveness. Yet there are still more than 1800 language groups today for which there is not even a translation project started. How will they know?

Praise!

- For technological and other advances in Bible translation.
- For continued opportunities to grow in my new roles.
- For health and strength for me and for Mom.
- For a sense that my transition to Indiana is essentially over.
- For the continued faithful prayers and gifts for my Wycliffe ministry.

& Prayer

- For personal spiritual growth.
- For good physical disciplines.
- For the Hani and other Bibleless people groups.

This man belongs to the Hani people who live in southern China near the border with Viet Nam. More than 750,000 people belong to the Hani language community, which is considered a minority in the vast nation of China. Since they speak a language totally different to Chinese, the literacy rate is low and they have no Scriptures available to them. The Chinese government has recognized that the Hani have the lowest quality of life of all the official Chinese minority groups. Please pray for the Hani people to have access to God's message so they might understand and have their lives transformed.

Personal Update

I've found a niche as an occasional online host for services at Faith Church. I've enjoyed being able to contribute to and be a part of that community, many of whom are still at-risk and unable to join in the in-person gatherings. Some of you are among that group -- it's nice to be able to give back in that way. I get to use a little bit a techy-ness to host, too, which is fun for me.

I've also been able to get into more predictable routines for some basic things in life, including exercise. I've walked the Indianapolis mini (half) marathon multiple times in the past. Perhaps that would be a good goal again for NEXT year! Who'd like to walk it with me?

I drove north to be with Mom on May 12, 2021, which led to my move in November. I cannot thank you enough for the many prayers, encouragements, Zooms, chats, notes, calls, texts, and visits that have helped me transition in this past year. I am grateful!
