

Assistant Professor (tenure track): Rhetoric of Health and Medicine

The Department of English Language and Literatures at the University of British Columbia (Vancouver) invites applications for an appointment in the field of The Rhetoric of Health and Medicine.

We seek to attract a range of candidates that can engage with the theories and methodologies currently informing health/medical humanities and that have research/supervision/teaching ability in the history and theory of rhetoric, rhetorical criticism, and the rhetoric of health and medicine. The appointment will be at the level of assistant professor (tenure-track) with an anticipated start date of July 1, 2022.

The Department of English Language and Literatures at UBC is unique in Canada in its ability to provide instruction and supervision in the history of the English language, linguistics, lexicography and the history and theory of rhetoric. The department also has a newly revised curriculum with courses on trans-national networks, diaspora and migration studies, Indigenous studies, critical race studies, anti/de/post-colonial studies, global south connections, world literatures, environmental studies and gender studies, all in conjunction with a robust historical curriculum. This appointment may also contribute to a number of curricular and research initiatives in the Faculty of Arts, including the Science and Technology Studies Graduate Program, the Social Justice Institute, and the Program in Media Studies.

Equity and diversity are essential to academic excellence. An open and diverse community fosters the inclusion of voices that have been underrepresented or discouraged. We encourage applications from members of groups that have been marginalized on any grounds enumerated under the B.C. Human Rights Code, including sexual orientation, gender, gender identity or expression, racialization, disability, political belief, religion, marital or family status, age, and/or status as a First Nation, Métis, Inuit, or Indigenous person (the latter understood broadly in its global context). Applicants are asked to include, as part of their application materials, a separate statement describing past experience that promotes diversity and inclusion, broadly understood and/or plans to make future contributions to more inclusive representation of racialized minorities in the applicant's core discipline(s), in the academy more broadly, and/or affiliate institution(s).

Applicants must have a PhD or provide solid indication of imminent completion. Applicants should have publications and experience teaching at the post-secondary level; they are expected to provide strong evidence of active and excellent research, and demonstrate a record of, or potential for, high quality teaching at the undergraduate and graduate levels.

The successful candidate will be expected to teach at the graduate and undergraduate levels and introductory courses as well as specialist area courses. The successful candidate will also be expected to maintain an active program of scholarly research leading to publication, effective teaching, graduate supervision, and service.

For information about the programs, faculty research interests, and general activities of the Department of English Language and Literatures visit: <https://english.ubc.ca>.

To ensure full consideration, applicants should submit their applications online through <https://engl.air.arts.ubc.ca/position-jr3363/> and be prepared to upload the following in the order listed: a letter of application, curriculum vitae, a description of current and future research interests, statement of teaching philosophy, the one-page diversity statement referred to above, a sample of ongoing research preferably in the form of published material, and evidence of teaching effectiveness. Applicants should also arrange to have confidential letters from three referees sent to english.recruitment@ubc.ca by the same deadline.

Applications and all supporting materials should be received by October 1, 2021. Review of applications will begin soon after this date and will continue until the position is filled.

This position is subject to final budgetary approval. Salary will be commensurate with qualifications and experience. Queries should be addressed to:

Professor Patricia Badir, Head
The Department of English Language and Literatures,
University of British Columbia
397-1873 East Mall
Vancouver, BC; Canada V6T 1Z1

All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, Canadians and permanent residents will be given priority.

Given the uncertainty caused by the global COVID-19 pandemic, applicants must be prepared to conduct interviews remotely if circumstances require. A successful applicant may be asked to consider an offer containing a deadline without having been able to make an in-person visit to campus if travel and other restrictions are still in place.