

This is the documentary that will change how you buy, cook and eat food.

The Rockefeller Foundation, which last year made a $130 million commitment to cut food waste in half by 2030, supported Zero Point Zero Films and Anthony Bourdain to create WASTED! The Story of Food Waste, a feature-length documentary that will change how people buy, cook and eat food. Through the eyes of chef-heroes like Bourdain, Dan Barber, Mario Batali, Massimo Bottura, and Danny Bowien, audiences will see how the world's most influential chefs make the most of every kind of food, transforming what most people consider scraps and rejects into incredible dishes that feed more people and create a more sustainable food system. The film also features several food waste reduction stories all over the world including waste-fed pigs in Japan, a disposal program that has reduced household food waste by 30% in South Korea, and a garden education curriculum New Orleans. WASTED! The Story of Food Waste showcases forward-thinking leaders who show how each of us can make small changes - all of them delicious - to solve one of the greatest problems of the 21st Century.

Sponsored by: Sponsored by Zero Waste Sonoma County, helping Sonoma County, the Bay Area, California and the whole world move toward economies in which waste has been designed out of the system. Our 2014 goal is to encourage local groups and individuals working on wasting less to get to know each other better, and help lay the foundation for establishing Sonoma as a Zero Waste County.
