

THIRD ANNOUNCEMENT

The 13th Southern Hemisphere Delta Conference on the teaching and learning of Undergraduate Mathematics and Statistics

Kia ora from Tāmaki Makaurau, Auckland, New Zealand!

Delta conferences attract an international audience of academics interested in mathematics and statistics education, including disciplinary specialists, education theorists, and tertiary education practitioners across the mathematical sciences and engineering. With the threats of the pandemic over the past year, delegates are invited to participate from a distance for a virtual Herenga Delta 2021 Conference. So we warmly welcome friends and colleagues, old and new, from across the Southern and the Northern Hemispheres to participate at Herenga Delta in late November 2021. This first virtual conference for Delta will be hosted from:

The University of Auckland

Monday 22 November to Thursday 25 November 2021

Submissions: Herenga Delta invites you to contribute to the conference theme, Values and Variables in Mathematics and Statistics Education, with a particular focus on any of the following sub-themes:

- Research-informed evidence-based teaching and learning practices in mathematics and statistics tertiary education;
- Curriculum design and delivery that addresses the needs of all learners;
- Challenges of wider participation: addressing the needs of non-traditional students at university;
- Values and variables in mathematics and statistics teaching and learning encounters;
- Innovation in teaching and assessment: novel approaches and practices;
- Online teaching and learning;
- Mathematics and statistics for non-mathematics majors;
- Learning pathways into university-level mathematics and statistics;
- Policy and support issues.

Please note the revised dates for each type of submission:
