Wetlands: they make all the difference in Wisconsin and on this planet called Mother Earth!

Ho-Chunk Nation Representative Conroy Greendeer, Jr. said, "If Ho-Chunk people had written the laws, we'd incorporate the rights of nature to thrive, not merely survive. Meteor Timber's permit application was clearly deficient. We won't take any time to rejoice—this planet is still suffering from overexploitation. Our next generations simply will not survive if we allow polluters to contaminate our beautiful landscape without remediation and without remorse."

Good News!

Wisconsin Supreme Court won't hear company's case to reinstate permit for frac sand operation

Meteor Timber sought to reinstate permit to fill 16 acres of wetlands
