| 6:00  | - | 6:15 | IcebreakerParticipants talk in pairs for five minutes, then each introduces the other to the group. One suggested question: describe a positive experience you have had in nature  |
| 6:15  | - | 6:20 | Very quick introduction to the briefIncluding the overall timeline: endorsements, presentation, the committee deliberating, and different possible recommendations from them to the president  |
| 6:20: | - | 7:00 | First brainstorming sessionTopic: Getting endorsementsIn small groups, participants brainstorm ways to get endorsements for the brief. Specifically, they brainstorm tasks that one person can do in 30 minutes. At the end, people are encouraged to volunteer to actually do one task. The rest get sent out to the members' list.If groups finish early, they can move on to brainstorming ways of building community support for the divestment campaign, beyond brief endorsements.   |
| 7:00  | - | 7:15 | Break  |
| 7:15  | - | 8:00 | Second brainstorming sessionTopic: Presenting the brief to the presidentAgain, small groups brainstorm ways in which we might present the fully endorsed brief in an effective way, as well as 30 minute tasks that individuals could undertake to aid the effort.If groups have extra time, they can brainstorm about what sort of supplementary witnesses or evidence we can provide to the committee that will consider the brief, and what sort of 30-minute tasks could support that. |

People will be encouraged to volunteer for as many or as few 30 minute modules as they wish, with all the time up to the 15th to do them.

At the end, the email addresses of everyone who is interested will be added to a disorientation@toronto350.org mailing list, allowing people to stay in touch after the fact. In particular, people are encouraged to send around a message after they have completed any task they volunteered for.

We will also ask if any participants would be willing to come to our workshop at the Oct. 25-27 green youth summit, to share their experience with the participants there.
